Celebrating Adult Learners Week with a Permaculture Lunch

Adult Learners Week is a nationwide celebration of lifelong learning with this year's theme being 'Learning Changes Lives'. For the first week of Spring, adult education organisations around the country take time to acknowledge and promote the important work we contribute to individuals lives, our local communities and society at large. Learning improves people's lives in many ways and we see this happen every day here at Byron Community College.

To celebrate Adult Learners Week this year the college held a permaculture lunch in the Mullumbimby courtyard. Prepared by Permaculture aficionado and college tutor Sharon Gibson, the impressive spread was sourced mostly from her garden and included red cassava cake with yacón which included green banana flour that Sharon made from scratch, beetle leaf wrapped 'party in your mouth' and black sapote icy poles. Sharon's intention was to showcase the interesting permaculture plants that grow in our region and demonstrate how they can be used in delicious ways. Keeping in line with permaculture principles, the spread used compostable serving ware and bamboo tables made by the recent Bamboo Basics class students.

Enjoying the offerings was Certificate III in Permaculture student Megan Cass who shared that through the course she has found the calling that she had been searching for. "I had been looking for something in my life that could fulfil me" shares Megan "I felt a calling to work with the earth but at the time I didn't know what that looked like". Once she began the course, she knew she was in the right place. "The course has given me insight to the future and my path has been laid. I see myself working with others in a team creating food forests and sharing skills with those keen to learn. Being with people with like passion and giving back to the earth. I would love to share this wonderful knowledge and community". Megan has set the intention to complete the Certificate IV in Permaculture with the college next year.

Current Certificate IV student Dean Eastwood also raves about his experience studying with the college. "It's challenging" he shared "and I don't have enough time for all of the projects I would like to get started such as building biodomes. But there will be time down the track". Dean shares an exciting enthusiasm for his permaculture studies and is clearly very happy to be here at Byron College.

For anyone interested in trying Sharon's delicious permaculture food, you'll have to come and study the Certificate III next year to learn all her secrets.

Student Profile Daniella Lawall Certificate III in Horticulture and Certificate IV in Permaculture

Prior to studying at Byron College I ran a clothing shop in Coolangatta for 2 years selling natural fabrics and plants. Then I started thinking about farming, inspired by a desire to work with plants.

An internet search lead me to the Byron College website and I considered studying horticulture and permaculture. I closed the shop and started studying. I had no experience with growing so I was starting from scratch. I decided to do horticulture first because there are more jobs available in that industry and then decided to follow with Permaculture, initially doing the introduction course and then the Certificate IV.

Following the courses I have collaborated with a fellow student and friend to start a business called HOLOS which offers Regenerative Design, implementation and education services. We have rented a farm in Brunswick Heads for 4 years and are planting a food forest using syntropic farming principles. We'll be running courses there and using it as a demonstration site. www.holosdesign.com.au.

Doing the course changed my life. My family is very happy and have learnt how to grow food. I've converted my garden and those of some friends into edible gardens. I've planted lots of food trees and vegetables, even though I'm renting. I'm happy that I can leave this for the next person who rents the house. My children get to pick their food from the garden and they love it! They are making healthy choices on their own having seen the transition in me.
